FREE YOURSELF FROM CHRONIC PAIN with Restorative & Therapeutic Yoga with JULIA LORIMER

Four Saturday classes in this series, each 2:30–4:30 PM

Classes will focus on healing your own pain in the following areas

- Sept. 21: Back
- Oct. 12: Hips
- Nov. 16: Shoulders
- Dec. 14: Neck

Each workshop will help you to identify the cause and the effect of tension patterns that can lead to chronic pain and injuries. Each series is new and individualized with the aim to release tension and pain from your mind and body as it is today. Gentle traction poses will be used for bringing newfound strength and elasticity in the body; wall ropes and other specialized props will be used for opening, stuck tight parts of the body.

Presented in simple language, Julia will demonstrate alignment principles for achieving balance, core strength and deep breathing as they apply to various body regions and conditions. The activities of daily living including sitting, standing and moving will become sources of healing and less sources of stress, tension and pain. You will gain a deeper sense of resilience from the wear and tear of life as you move through the world.

Guided meditations taught in class help you to calm your reactions to the stresses of life. They provide a quiet place to relax in your own stable presence and to discover yourself more healed and whole. In meditation, the wayward mind is led back to its own source, your own benign presence, simple and free.

These guided meditations are based in non-dual teachings gleaned from the Vedanta scriptures, the Yoga Sutras, and the Bhagavad Gita as taught by Swami Dayananda.

JULIA LORIMER, Certified Yoga Therapist, has specialized in pain management for three decades, combining Iyengar Yoga Therapeutics with anatomically detailed deep tissue therapy.
